

Recommendation letter for Esther Nakkazi

Dear election committee,

I am writing to recommend Esther Nakkazi for a post on the WFSJ board.

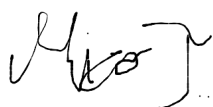

I've known Esther as a professional science reporter for almost a decade now, she wrote regularly for us at SciDev.Net, and she also freelanced for me at New Scientist. We've recently discussed a possible story for Nature, too, so she is an experienced and active science journalist.

Esther is also an active voice in Uganda's science journalism association, which is twinned with the ABSW: one of the few still active twinning arrangement originally devised by the WFSJ. We have organised exchanges between the UK and Uganda in the recent past, and are still discussing how we can improve our links further.

Apart from being active in Uganda, and more widely in East Africa, Esther also freelances for international media and has done a fellowship at MIT, which means she is well clued-in to international issues in science journalism, too. She is a regular at the WCSJ, which reflects her ongoing interest in our profession and her global connections.

I can whole heartedly recommend Esther for this role.

Best regards,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Mico Tatalovic', with a stylized flourish at the end.

Mico Tatalovic
24/04/2019 in London, UK