Dear Christophe Bourillon,

It is with great pleasure that I would like to propose to you Mr. MBENG BOUM Joslain Joseph, on the Board of Directors of the WFSJ before the next election of the Board of Directors.

I met Mr. MBENG BOUM through his relevant publications on the very sensitive and complex field of science journalism in Cameroon. Available, very active nationally and internationally in the field of science journalism, he is today an undisputed leader in the field. As proof, the initiative to create a federation of science journalists in sub-Saharan Africa started with other confreres in Africa. The project is progressing well and has been hailed as an outstanding initiative by colleagues from respective national associations on the continent.

Also, the most recent of the scientific associations in Cameroon is one of his many ideas and we can congratulate him for the fact that he directs it masterfully. With ideas full of ideas to bring his personal touch to scientific journalism and contribute to its growth, he does not hesitate to innovate and launch projects and concepts in our professions. He is the promoter of the Women's Health Leadership Award, which aims to reward those who stand out in this field. His local association SciLife has been able to count on him to reach a higher level in the field of scientific journalism. The universal health coverage to which the country is committed is not left out. Indeed, Mr. Mbeng Boum won the best media contest in this CSU with 73% of votes.

Humble, attentive to everyone, temperate, very active, of an infallible determination, he managed to win the respect of the health authorities and UN bodies represented in Cameroon. He is a leader whose fame and credibility are unchallenged. I could continue to expand on his incredible professional, human and managerial qualities but I will limit myself to saying that his commitment, his expertise, his healthy self-confidence and his excellent leadership make him, in my humble opinion, the best person for this position. It is therefore with pleasure that I recommend

Mr. MBENG BOUM Joslain Joseph to the Board of Directors of the World Federation of Science Journalists (WFSJ).
