

To,

The Nomination Committee
World Federation of Science Journalists

The Science Journalists Association of India (SJAI) is happy to nominate Subhransu Priyadarsini, Chief Editor of Nature India and President of SJAI for election to the board of the World Federation of Science Journalists.

Subhra is one of the most accomplished science editors in South Asia. At Nature India, she has consistently demonstrated a commitment to promoting rigorous, ethical, and impactful science journalism. Under her editorial leadership — first as the launch editor and then as the chief editor — the publication has not only grown in readership but has become widely respected for its in-depth coverage of critical scientific issues ranging from climate change to biodiversity conservation, public health, and emerging technologies.

What sets Subhra apart is her dedication to nurturing the next generation of science journalists. As SJAI's President, she has mentored emerging reporters and offered guidance on navigating careers in a fast-evolving media landscape. Through workshops, training sessions, and one-on-one mentoring, she has empowered young journalists worldwide to tell science stories that matter.

Subhra has played a pivotal role in fostering global collaborations among science journalists. Whether working on international projects or speaking at global conferences, she is known for her ability to bring together diverse voices from different regions, particularly amplifying perspectives from underrepresented areas. Her commitment to inclusivity aligns with the WFSJ's goals of promoting science journalism in every corner of the world. We strongly believe that Subhra will bring an invaluable perspective to the WFSJ Board. Her experience, vision, and unwavering commitment to advancing science journalism make her uniquely suited to contribute to the Federation's mission of enhancing the quality and reach of science journalism globally.

Sincerely,

Virat Markandeya, Vice President SJAI

Jacob Koshy, Treasurer SJAI

Sahana Ghosh, Secretary SJAI
